

WANTED

For invasive spreading and unlawful claiming of territory.

REWARD:

Native plants in exchange for the Outlaw Honeysuckle.

Lonicera morrowii

AKA Bush Honeysuckle, Morrow's Honeysuckle

Bush Honeysuckle has invaded over 32 states (and counting) since introduced as a garden ornamental in the 1800's. It's nectar is inferior for bees and pollinators. The berries have no nutritive value for birds. The leaves and roots have toxic compounds that prevents other plants (especially native plants) from growing nearby and, if they get into water, kill tadpoles and salamander eft (babies/larvae).
